MILK INSPECTION AND TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. E. C. Levy Outlines the Work to Be Done by the Department Thereon.

Health Officer Defines Two Phases of Milk Inspection and Shows Why.

Dr. Ernest C. Levy, health officer of the city of Richmond, left yesterday on a four which will include New York, Baltimore, Philidelphia and Boston in the litnerary for the purposes of preparing for a systematic campaign against tuber-cuiosis and to better prepare for sanitary milk inspection work.

Both of these subjects are luminously discussed by the health officer in his annual report of the work of the department. On the subject of milk-inspection he said in part:

"Our milk and food ordinance deals chiefly with the condemnation of visibly solled food supplies, and with milk below the standard in nutritive value. In the past this has been carefully followed up, but little attention has been paid to the far more important matter of cleanliness of milk. Dirty milk is recognized as title cause of the infantile diarrhoeal diseases, especially in the summer, and the correction of this will undoubtedly have a great effect in the lessening of the number of deaths from this cause.

"Circumstances are favorable, for the most part, for the sanitary control of the milk supply of Richmond, but the funds have not been available for the necessary inspection of the dairy farms and the carrying our of the other measures involved. All the milk sold in Richmond is produced at nearby farms, thus rendering it entirely practicable to exercise supervision over the conditions under which it is produced. This is in great contrast to conditions which obtain in larger cities. In New York, for example, all the milk comes into town by train, some of it from as great a distance as 400 miles. As a consequence of this, the milk furnished to the consumer is never less than twenty-four hours' old, more often forty-eight, and not infrequently even older.

In New York, therefore, the question is being constantly agitated as to the advisability of pasteurizing the entire milk supply of the city. " Milk which has ever had developed in it such enormous numbers of germs as must be present where it was not clean at the start, and has thus been

Importance of Inspection.

Importance of Inspection.

"Our plans for the coming year include the sanitary improvement of the milk supply.

Further on in the report, Dr. Levy has this to say of the milk supply and its inspection:

"Next to the water supply, the milk supply of a city is the most far-reaching vehicle of conveying infectious diseases. Not only have we records of numbers of epidemies of typinoid-fover, and perhaps scarlet-fever, so carried, but, far more important than these occasional epidemics, is the regular communication of intestinal troubles, especially among bottle-fed infants, by milk which has become dangerous, not by infection from other with similar troubles, but which is simply loaded with bacteria, which owe their presence to careless handling of the milk—dirty cows, dirty barns, dirty pails, dirty hands of milkers, delivery of the milk without proper cooling, or when it has been kept too long.

"A preliminary investigation which I made of the milk supply of Richmond in August and September, 1965, before becoming connected with the Health Department, showed that much of the milk sutterly unit for human food, water is utterly unit for human food, this, have made this one of the special this, have made this one of the special things to receive attention during 1907, and In order to carry the necessary measures line effect, they have asked for and received the sum of 32,000. This will provide for proper inspection of dairy farms and for bacteriological examinations of milk as one improper handling of the milk at some point, but it does not tell whether the milk has been handled in a dirty manner or whether it has simply been kept too long or at too high a temperature. Further investigation, therefore, is always called for where the bacteriological examination shows too high a count. Its great advantage is that it furnishes a means by which watch can be kept over a large number of individual supplies, and that the inspector may collect samples without warning, thus detecting improper-handling of a milk gotten from a farmer who might make special exertions on the occasion of an inspector's visit, and then be as careless as he pleases in certain directions until the next visit. After learning that a sample collected for bacteriological examination will show his delinquencies, although no one actually saw them at the time, he will be led to the regular exercise of greator care.

"Situated as Richmond is, there is sery reason why her citizens should get differ the milk which is made them from a farmer who might make there is not the producer of the producers who satisfaction there is a received the producer of the producers who satisfaction them milk which is not they have no satisfaction the milk at the producer of the producers who satisfaction there is a fare excellently-equipped, and there is an excellently-equipped, and there is a produced. Why the producer is the consumers directly. Some of these have clean, well-eventure the producer of the producers where the consumers directly. Tuberculosis in This City,

Tuberculosis in This City,

"In no direction is the contrast between the death rate of the two races in Richmond more strongly brought out than in tuberculosis. In 1998 there were 235 deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption), fourteen of the decedents being non-residents, Of these 325 deatedents, 102 were white and 133 colored. The colored population, which constitutes thirty-eight per aent of the total population, furnished fifty-seven per cent. of all the deaths from consumption."

Here follows a table showing the results just summarized, and the report then continues: From the above it appears that the death rate from consumption among the colored people (including non-residents) was 2.14 times as high as among the whites. It is believed that even these figures do not quite present the true state of the case, A large number of colored decedents are insured in companies which refuse to pay if the decedent dies within two years from any pulmonary disconse. This appears to be responsible for some cases of tuberculosis, at least, being returned as due to other causes.

"Since there were 981 deaths among the whites, and 1,017 among the colored in 1908, from all causes, one death in every 7.75 among the white population was due to consumption, and one in every 7.55 among the extense of the excessive douth

REV. DB: HAMLIN DIES IN NEW YORK CITY

Washington Divine Is Stricken With Apoplexy While Attending Peace Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—A dispatch received here from New York announces the death at Hahnemann Hospital! in that city, late last night, of Rev. Dr. Teunis S. Hamilin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, in this city. Dr. Hamilin went to New York early in the week to attend the peace congress. His death was due to apoplexy. He is survived by his wife, chaplain-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and two sons—Bert Hamilin, an attorney of New York, and Franklin Hamilin.

Dr. Hamilin was regarded as one of the most noted divines in the East, and his congregation numbered many persons of wealth and social prominence. President Benjamin Harrison having been a regular attendant. He was one of the trustees of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor, president of the Open Air Workers' Association of America and president of the board of trustees of Howard University, this city. WASHINGTON, April 18 .- A dispatel

Patrons of Bostock's Wild Animal Arena Thursday afternoon saw a fight to the death between two of the animals—the first time that such a fight has terminated in the history of the Bostock shows.

Michael, a Russian bear, and Poplete, an African hyena, were the combatants. It was war between Russia and Africa, in which both sides suffered heavily, but Africas finally went down and out. Both animals belong to Mile, Marcella's mixed group, and had just been returned to their dens after their act. The hyena started the row by grabbing the bear by the leg. Iu an instant Russia turned, and amid growls, roars, snaps and snarls, the two infuriated beasts fought.

Mile, Marcella entered the den just as the bear's huge jaws closed on the throat of the hyena. The daring young trainer did all in her power, but to no purpose. The death-grip was there. Keepers and other trainers rushed in and tried to save the poor hyena's life. Nothing could make the bear loosen his hold. And the hyena died, strangled to death.

Dr. Epps, the veterinarian, and Director Bostock agreed that, after the bear once closed his jaws on the hyena's throat, loosening the hold would have been of no avail, as the long, sharp fangs of the bear had penetrated the jugular veln and the wind-pipe and the animal's death wan only a question of minutes from the time of the death-grip.

"The Old Homested," ever old and ever new, is coming here on Saturday, matinee and night, and with it the ever-popular Uncle Josh, whose Joys and sorrows, failures and successes, so invariably interest an audience and arouse its sympathies. Joshua Whitcomb is the New England farmer to the life, and seeing him portrayed one loses sight altogether of the idea that it is a dramatic counterfelt rather than the genuine Yankee, who apparently steps from his hayfield to the barnyard of the Whitcomb homestead, nestling amid the New Hampshire hills. Verlly, the old play, dear to every one who has seen it, has lost none of its popularity, but rather increases in favor as the years wear on.
